History

The Maricel Palace, located in the historic center of Sitges, is part of Maricel's 19th-century (Noucentisme) architectural and artistic ensemble (1910-1918).

The Palace was built from 1913 to 1915 by American industrialist and art collector Charles Deering to house his art collections.

Its halls and terraces are currently used for cultural and institutional activities as well as for meetings, receptions and congresses.

EMBLEMATIC INTERIOR SPACES

The Gold Room, with a sumptuous decoration, is where protocol events, receptions, official civil weddings, concerts and gala dinners are held.

It's the largest capacity, offering 100 assistants in theatre-type montage. It's stage for weddings, photo shoots, filming, presentations or gala dinners.

The Blue Room, with its sharper furnishings and decoration, is equipped and prepared for presentations, meetings and conferences.

EMBLEMATIC EXTERIOR SPACES

The Maricel Palace has two outdoor spaces – from where there's a splendid panoramic view of the Mediterranean- the Terraces and the Cloister, prepared to celebrate appetizers, cocktails or coffee-break for symposium, commemorative days, meetings and events.

The Maricel Palace is one of the most unique buildings in Sitges. Integrated in Maricel's artistic and monumental ensemble, it's also known as Maricel de Terra, to differentiate it from the Museum, also known as Maricel de Mar.

With a markedly nineteenth-century style (Noucentista), the different rooms are distinguished by a singular decoration that accentuates their character.

USES

The Palace currently has a triple function: on the one hand, it's the venue for institutional and cultural events of considerable importance in the civic and cultural life of Sitges, such as concerts, conferences or presentations. On the other hand, some of its spaces host events of organizations and companies that rent their use, as well as civil weddings.

And finally, the rooms, the terrace and the cloister are accessible to the guided visits that Museums of Sitges organizes many Sundays.

The majestic Gold Room is the space used by Museums of Sitges to organize different academic sessions, conferences and cultural presentations.
